Biography

Writer Hannah Papp has truly lived by the premise that life is research for your novel. Seeking her own moveable feast, she worked diligently from an early age and had experienced 34 different types of jobs by the time she was 28. Her first published work was a satirical cartoon penned as a teen and printed in the local paper. Winner of the prestigious Carlton Arts Review Poetry contest, her poem entitled 'Billy Dean and Me' followed in their 1998 A New Instinct edition. While living abroad for several years during her mid-twenties, Hannah traveled extensively and documented her experiences in an endless stream of journals, on paper napkins and filling hard drives. Published translations and academic works followed.

With a Master's in History earned at an American accredited university in Hungary and an undergraduate degree in English Literature and History, her next step was truly unpredictable. Hannah began a video production company in Washington, D.C. Currently celebrating a decade of accolades, industry awards, and recognition as a top production company in the nation's capital, Hannah's efforts landed her on Crave's The Top 100 Women You Need to Know in the Washington DC Metropolitan Area list in 2010.

Hannah Papp currently heads up the Northern Virginia Mind, Body & Spirit Group and is a certified Soul Coach, Past Life Regressionist, and Reiki practitioner offering spiritual services to soul-seekers through her company My Soul's Purpose LLC. She is also the author of the successful and growing blog My Secret Psychic Life where she confides her personal successes and failures in informative and often humorous self-deprecating prose.
