

Kevin Kreider

Biography

Kevin Kreider left Philly in 2008 to navigate his way in entertainment as a Korean American adoptee. His career started in the fitness industry, when he signed with one of the most prestigious modeling agencies in NYC.

In 2014, Kevin was diagnosed with Alopecia Areata. He took a few years off, got sober in 2015, and took a leap of faith by moving to Los Angeles. There he was offered a role in the international hit "Bling Empire", Netflix's first all-Asian and Asian American reality show, the success of which opened up doors for more Asian actors on the platform.

Kevin started a production company to bring Asian Lead Love Stories to the world (ALLS Productions). He is also the Founder and CEO of Sans By Taejin Beverage, the first Asian-inspired drink, with the mission to empower and normalize sobriety.

